The Business of Community

When one considers the greatest business success stories that have occurred over the last several years, community oriented projects are at the top of the heap.

Both MySpace (190 million users) and YouTube (which sold to Google for 1.2 billion dollars) and more recently Facebook are all great examples of this phenomenon.

As a KBA board member, I am excited about trying to find new ways to apply the principles that caused these businesses to succeed at local level. I believe in community - rubbing shoulders with our neighbors. I believe in "facetime".

As we approach this holiday season, my fellow board members and I will be working together to create opportunities for local businesses to meet, network and learn from each other. Additionally, in the spirit of the Coconut Festival, we hope to create and facilitate smaller more frequent events that help you promote your business to the island's consumers.

On a more personal note, as a small business owner, I long for just such opportunities and I look forward to meeting you at one of these exciting new events.

Aloha,

Jeremy Hartshorn

Co-Owner & Manager of Small Town Coffee

News

September 2007

This year has, so far, been a somewhat interesting year with more traffic problems with less solutions, more litigation over the Superferry and potentially over Vacation Rentals,

As business owners it's our civic responsibility to do everything we can to foster a better business environment while protecting the land and the people. It's also our responsibility to voice our concerns over any legislation that may affect us, directly or indirectly. At the KBA we're always watching out for small, and large business on Kauai,
